Kursledarens kommentarer

The evaluation is very positive and we felt as if the course went smoothly with very engaged students. The main positive points we take with us from the evaluation is that the time allocated for the different tasks seems well balanced, that the social study environment has been excellent and that there was a good balance between practice and theory in the course.

The potential improvements lie in alerting for changes in the schedule (could sms be an option?) and also a wish to have two, rather than one, assignments that are graded.

We spoke about some comments on lectures being mandatory or not, and I said that we do not want them to be, as we argue that this is a master level course, the students are experienced enough to take responsibility for their own studies. If they miss lectures, then they themselves need to follow up on what they might have missed, by asking other students in the class.

Studentrepresentantens kommentarer

From what I felt as a participant of the class, there were some students who struggled more than others, and some who enjoyed it less than others, but the overall feel was that it was a great introduction to environmental communication. Some experienced difficulties with the structure and clarity of certain instructions and of which parts were mandatory. However, this IS a master level course; we should be expected to take our own responsibility to resolve unclarities.

However, I feel that there was some significant unease about the facilitation weeks and the home exam, as detailed in the evaluation responses on various occasions. If there is anything worth focusing efforts for improvement, it would be this (and doing something about Fronter :p)

Another over-arching challenge was getting into social science thinking for the students with a natural science background (which is perfectly understandable and beautifully rewarding for us in terms of learning, once we get past the initial barriers).

Overall, the group atmosphere has been fantastic.
