Course leaders comments

Thank you to all students, teachers and visiting guests for your thoughtful reflections and engagement! The course has offered opportunities to explore landscape architecture through drawing, model-making, composition, form, force, light and sound, as well as through encounters with the site, the client and different landscape projects. Students particularly valued the workshops, site visits, night walk, model work and Stockholm excursion.

The different exercises and perspectives helped students develop their own design processes, explore and test ideas without overthinking, and become more confident in making decisions. Many also described gaining a deeper understanding of how sketching, physical models, atmosphere, materiality, topography, light and sound can inform and shape a design.

The course team will further develop and adjust the workshops to better relate to the studio project, especially the composition workshops. We will also try to include the (fictive) clients as tutors to strengthen the connection to professional practice even further.
