Course leaders comments

The course is not a typical course. The main work is the internship, and the course is mostly to support the internship. We have three meetings during the 20 weeks of the course and three turn-in assignments. The course initiate by inviting students and supervisors (at the internship placement) to an introduction seminar. Mid-term, each student has individual supervision by the course leader. The course finalizes by a final seminar discussing the academic report that each student has written. Apart from the final report, an internship journal is submitted by each student twice during the course.

This is a new way of organizing the course, and the course evaluation support the conclusion that this is a good way of organizing the course. Based on this, there is no reason to make large changes to the course outline.

The number of hours spent by students on the course varies greatly, I think there is a misconception of the survey question, as students typically work between 35-40 hours per week in their internship placement.
