Course leaders comments

The course in Microbial Horticulture was given as an on campus course with 11 students. Out of these, 6 answered the course evaluation giving an answer frequency of 54 %. Overall, the course evaluation score was high with a mean value of 4.5.

The students answered that the course contents had a clear connection to the course objectives (4.5), and that the course contents supported their learning (4.7). Especially the lab exercises were highly appreciated along with the writing of lab reports, which was seen as a great opportunity to achieve a deeper understanding of the subject of microbiology and its complexity in connection with environmental conditions. The combination of lectures, lab exercises, quizzes, workshops and excursions was appreciated. Some of the students felt that their prior knowledge in the subject was not sufficient to benefit from all of the course contents (4.0), but still felt that it could be followed well. The work load for the course is supposed to be 40 hours per week, but the number of hours spent per week varied between the students: on average they spent 36.7 hours per week, which seems reasonable. There were comments on the rather high load of literature and they felt that it was not possible to go through all of the articles provided. This will be looked at to see if it can be slimmed down to fit the number of hours of the course in a better way. Both guest lecturers (4.4) and study visits (4.7) were perceived as relevant and provided new insights for the practical applications of the subject.

Student representatives comments

The overall experience of the course was positive, as indicated by the evaluation scores. Even though just over half of the students responded, their sentiments and comments during the course aligned with the evaluation.

The main criticism was directed at the amount of literature, which most students found overwhelming. The exam method was new to many but generally considered good, albeit somewhat challenging. Suggestions were made to reduce the number of articles or questions to allow students a better opportunity to demonstrate their learning.

The laboratory exercises were a favorite among most students, despite not everyone having previous experience. The course was well-organized, with relevant study visits, and supportive lectures and quizzes contributed to the learning experience
